America Entered Into War After the Cabinet Declared "Parley no Longer Possible"

ARTICLE 2.

"I want to do right, whether it is popular or not."

The words fell solemnly and deliberately from the lips of President Wilson as his eyes searched the souls of the grave-faced men gathered about the cabinet table.

Already the clamor and counter-clamor was rising from the country. The sympathies and prejudices of men were finding voice; passions were being stirred to utterance. The echo of the tumult could not be excluded wholly from the cabinet room. Each of us felt the vibration of popular sentiment and demand; each of us needed the steadying words of our great leader.

I give them the place of prominence in this article, which is to tell the story of two momentous pre-war cabinet meetings, because I believe they express, better than anything I could say, the spirit and attitude of Woodrow Wilson from the first days of America's crisis to the hour when he resigned the cares of office.

It is my conviction, as a result of close association with him in times of supreme stress, that in every great question the principle embodied in his simple but profound utterance controlled the course he ultimately decided to take. When he made up his mind that a thing was right, that it should be done, he did it, regardless of its cost on his party or his personal fortunes.

"Man for the Job."

His critics say that he made mistakes. He may have made some; yet I doubt if any other man of our generation in his position would have made as few. When he stepped from the White House a few weeks ago one of his bitterest enemies, a critic, referring to his leadership during the war years, said of him: "He was the man for the job."

Even his bitterest enemies cannot question his motives or his purity of purpose. I can say without reservation that during the entire eight years of his administration, I have never known of a single instance in which he did not act in accordance with his convictions. It has always been his custom not to ask, "Is this popular?" but, "Is it right?"

Intimated in my first article, the cabinet was ready for mobilization within a few hours after Bernstorff had delivered his ultimatum—in effect, that was that—to the state department. The word had gone to every ship and station on Thursday, February 2.

A cabinet meeting was called for the afternoon of Friday, February 2. As we assembled not one of us failed to realize the significance of the occasion. The hour had come for a tremendous decision. The time for negotiation and parley was at an end. This conviction, I believe, was in the soul of every man in the room.

Gym Exhibition By Students at H. S. Tonight

The high school gymnasium exhibition will be given tonight and tomorrow night. The classes of boys and girls, drilled by their physical instructors, Miss Anne Mellon and J. P. Rupp, will present for the patrons of the exhibit a spectacle of their daily class work and show just what a gymnasium is doing for the students in the school.

Because of the small seating space of the gymnasium, admission will be by ticket only. These have been distributed to the students participating in the demonstration, who will give them to their parents. Persons holding tickets, however, will have to present them before 8 o'clock as at that time the doors will be open to the public.

HIGH SCHOOL FIRE DRILL

Building Filled of 1,000 Persons in Less Than Two Minutes.

In the first of what are expected to be regular fire drills the high school building was this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock emptied of more than 1,000 students and teachers in a minute and 55 seconds. Five exits were used. Inspector James S. Darr and Fire Chief W. E. DeBolt witnessed the drill. Fire drills have been made compulsory, even in fireproof buildings. They will be held weekly.

ABROGATION OF RAIL AGREEMENTS GIVEN APPROVAL

Executives and Labor Leaders Say It Will Expedite Negotiations.

EFFECTIVE ON JULY 1

By Associated Press.
CHICAGO, April 15.—Both railroad executives and labor leaders today declared the decision of the United States Railroad Labor Board abrogating national agreements would materially advance the efforts to arrive at an agreement satisfactory to all parties. The board directed individual roads and their employees to confer and agree upon new working rules by July 1.

Labor representatives said many of the 16 basic principles laid down in the board's decision to govern the conference on new working agreements, especially the eight-hour day and the right of the employee to organize and select their own representatives, included principles they have been fighting for. Railroad executives said that the decision recognized their contention that many of the rules should not have a national application.

CHICAGO, April 15.—National agreements defining working conditions for employees on all American railroads formerly under the Federal Railroad Administration were yesterday ordered abrogated, effective July 1, 1921, by the United States Railroad Labor Board.

The board called upon the officers and system organizations of employees of each railroad to select representatives "to confer and to decide" as much of the rules controversy as possible.

"Such conferences shall begin at the earliest possible date," the decision said.

The decision affects all railroad employees, except those in train service, who are under separate agreements between the individual railroads and the four big brotherhoods.

In connection with the conference negotiations, the board laid down a set of 16 principles to serve as a foundation for any rules which may be agreed to in the conference. The principles, which have been in progress since January 20, will continue until both sides have completed their testimony, following which the board "will promulgate such rules as it determines just and reasonable as soon after July 1, 1921, as is reasonably possible and will make them effective as of July 1, 1921."

It was specified that "eight hours' work must be given for eight hours' pay." Espionage should not be practiced by either side, the decision said, and employees' representatives should have the right to make an agreement applying to all employees in the craft or class of the representatives.

DEDICATION ANNIVERSARY

Will Be Observed by Moore Memorial Church Sunday.

The 15th anniversary of the dedication of the Moore Memorial United Brethren church will be observed on Sunday, April 17, with special services both morning and evening. Dr. J. S. Fulton of Johnstown, superintendent of the Allegheny conference, will preach at both services. There will be special music. The entire offering will go toward improvement of the church and parsonage.

The cornerstone of the church was laid September 14, 1901. Dr. W. R. Funk of Dayton, O., officiating. The building cost $1,000, was almost covered by a $3,000 contribution of Mrs. Sarah B. Cochran of Dawson.

The program for both services follows: Song, by choir; prayer; song, by juniors; historical reading; song, by choir; Scripture reading; anthem, by choir; sermon, Dr. J. S. Fulton; offering; anthem, by choir; benediction.

Largest B. & O. Veterans' Auxiliary is Formed Here

The largest woman's auxiliary of the Baltimore & Ohio Veterans Employees' association on the railroad system was formed in Connellsville Thursday night, with a membership of 121. Some missionary work on the part of about 80 who responded to the first invitation to become members brought the number to the record figure.

The auxiliary was organized during the rally held by the veteran employees' association at the high school building, with J. M. Garvey, grand vice-president and general organizer, in charge. At the opening of the general meeting President P. J. Harrigan invited the women in the audience who wished to become members to accompany Mr. Garvey to the study hall on the east of the auditorium. After the number had been counted somebody suggested that if others were recruited Connellsville might take the lead of the system. So a number of the women returned to the auditorium and made a canvass with the result before mentioned.

At the conclusion of the women's session announcement was made by Mr. Garvey that the enrollment was 121. This was found today to have been incorrect and the statement was made officially that there are 131.

Mrs. Annie Snyder was elected president; Mrs. Maude Wardley, vice president; Mrs. Lou Biner, secretary; Mrs. Cora Robinson, financial secretary; Mrs. Edward Marsh, treasurer, and Mrs. James Cowgill, sergeant-at-arms.

The auxiliary will hold its first regular meeting at the Baltimore & Ohio Y. M. C. A. on Monday, May 2, at which time the future of the unit will be discussed.

The Connellsville auxiliary was the 12th that has been formed. Mr. Garvey said. The total membership, including Connellsville, is 1,763. Garrett, Ind., has up to Thursday night boasted of the largest auxiliary with 89 members, and Hazelwood was second with 87.

BOOST NOW WORTH 10 TIMES AS MUCH AS IN SIX MONTHS

Most Crucial Period of Baltimore & Ohio at Hand, Employees Told.

EVERY CARLOAD HELPS

The next 30 days will be the most crucial period in the history of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, and other companies as well, declared H. O. Hartzell of Baltimore, manager of the commercial development department of the Baltimore & Ohio system at a rally at the high school auditorium Thursday evening under the auspices of the Connellsville division of the Baltimore & Ohio Veterans' association.

Business given the Baltimore & Ohio the next 30 days will mean more to the company, to the employees and their families than 10 times as much six months hence, said Mr. Hartzell, who attended the meeting as the personal representative of President Daniel Willard. There has not been a time when increased freight and passenger service amounted to quite so much as it will during the few weeks to come, according to the speaker.

Mr. Hartzell emphasized that he was not here as a calmly bowler, but simply for the purpose of urging all the cooperation that can be given by employees of the system in order that men who are now harried because of the slump in traffic may be returned to their positions.

During the first 12 days of April, Mr. Hartzell said, the Baltimore & Ohio fell behind 23,000 cars, meaning a slump of a million dollars. Pointing to the Baltimore & Ohio as the "greatest railroad on earth," in the matter of "equipment, service and everything else," Mr. Hartzell called on the employees of the Connellsville division and their wives to be boosters of their road, and to secure for it a car of freight or a passenger whenever the opportunity presented itself.

Cards to be used for the purpose of getting pledges from business men and other shippers to use the Baltimore & Ohio were distributed among the members of the veterans' association and other railroad men and women. These cards to be filled out and returned to the offices in Baltimore.

Mr. Hartzell complimented the veterans and the city for the response that was made to the former appeal for business, in January, and expressed hope that the cooperation would continue.

D. S. Lewis, general freight agent, Pittsburgh, spoke briefly on brotherhood.

Grand President G. W. Sturmer declared that there is more of the spirit of brotherhood among officials and employees of the Baltimore & Ohio than any other railroad in the world. Much of the credit for this was given to the veterans' association, which now numbers 20,000. The Baltimore & Ohio, he said, has the "greatest body of officials in the United States, excepting none." He urged confidence and cooperation to bring the road out of its present distress.

Grand Vice-President J. M. Garvey spoke briefly. He had just completed the organization of a woman's auxiliary to the division veterans' association with a membership of 111.

The bone of contention was the theme of W. W. Wood of Baltimore, chief of the welfare department. It was generally held that the Germans, into the mistakes of bringing on the war, he said. The ideal condition of the human race will come, said Mr. Wood, when all men are manly men and all women womanly women. He urged that all pull together for the welfare of the company which he represented.

E. J. Van Sant, editor of the railroad magazine, did not get here. Brief talks were made by President P. J. Harrigan and James Wardley.

G. K. Bell, president of the association at Willard, O., was a visitor. At a business meeting 42 employees were voted into membership in the division association.

Other features of the evening were vocal duets by Mr. and Mrs. William Thomas, vocal solos by Mr. Thomas, Miss Winnie Harrigan and Herbert Ellis; a violin solo by Miss Blida Solomon; national dances by Little Margaret Lewin; and selections by the Baltimore & Ohio band.

Rev. B. W. Hutchinson opened the meeting with prayer.

Veterans to Hold Outing.
The annual outing of the Baltimore & Ohio Veterans Employees' association of the Connellsville division will be held during the summer at a time and place to be decided later, according to a motion adopted at the meeting of the organization Thursday night at the high school hall.

RAILWAY MEN IN BRITISH STRIKE CANCEL SUMMONS

Transport Workers' Walkout Also Called Off, It Is Announced.

MINERS REMAIN OBDURATE

By Associated Press.
LONDON, April 15.—Announcement that the railwaymen's strike, set for 10 o'clock tonight, had been cancelled was made shortly before 4 o'clock this afternoon by J. H. Thomas, general secretary of the railway men's union. No explanation was immediately available of the railway men's action but it was thought it might indicate a split in the triple alliance.

The transport workers' strike also has been called off, Mr. Thomas announced.

As far as the railway men and transport workers are concerned the strike is cancelled," he said. It developed that Mr. Thomas this morning informed the miners he believed they should accept the proposal of their general secretary, Frank Hodges, for a resumption of negotiations and that under the circumstances the executives of the railway men would not feel justified in calling off its men.

The executives of the transport workers took the same view. The calling of a conference of representatives of all the coal fields at date to be fixed tomorrow was decided on by the executives of the miners' federation this evening. It took this action after hearing the decision of the railway men and transport workers to cancel their sympathetic strike.

Frank Hodges, the miners' secretary said it meant the miners' strike would continue.

"If I had resigned (as he was reported to have done) I should not be giving you this report," he added.

LONDON, April 15.—Mr. Lloyd George, the prime minister, announced in the house of commons this afternoon that the miners had refused to reopen negotiations for a settlement of their strike on the basis that had been suggested.

The prime minister read a letter from the miners' federation stating the only condition on which a temporary settlement could be reached was one which must follow concession of the two principals of a national wage board and a national pool.

Former Division Engineer, B. & O., Given Promotion

According to an announcement made by C. W. Gallowsay, vice president in charge of operation of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, several important appointments become effective today.

P. W. Scheer, general superintendent at Baltimore, becomes general manager of lines east, restoring a position vacated several months ago when C. E. Ennos was released to take a position with the Wheeling & Lake Erie. Mr. Scheer has recently been serving as general superintendent with a jurisdiction extending from Philadelphia to Grafton. R. B. White, superintendent at Baltimore, becomes Mr. Scheer's successor as general superintendent.

P. G. Hoskins is also appointed superintendent at Baltimore. He was formerly division engineer of the Connellsville division; later superintendent at Wheeling and still later terminal superintendent at Pittsburgh and in the same capacity at Baltimore since 1913.

Operation on A. A. Strub.

A. A. Strub, formerly of Connellsville, now of Pittsburgh, underwent a very serious operation in a Pittsburgh hospital yesterday for abscesses of the head. His condition was considerably grave following the operation.

Donnelly Pays Visit to City to Look Over Local Scene
From the Dispatch

BOXER IS READY

Johnny Donnelly, the clever Union town boxer, who is to meet Tommy Phillips tonight at Slavish hall, made a long visit to this city last evening to look over the field. The county seat looks to be in the best condition of his career and will no doubt make the McKeesport step his best. Phillips, victory over Young Carmen last night, was a good one. Local fans look for Donnelly to have the high ball sign of Johnny.

Jackie Krouse, the clever little flyweight, was ordered to report to Duke Barry yesterday. Promoted, he would be unable to go through with the bout because of a sustained laceration in his neck. He came on, however, and on his arrival, examination disclosed he was suffering from blood poisoning, started by picking a pimple. Johnny Jones, another speedy boy of the flyweight class, will meet with Reed Brown in the semi-final instead. It is promised there will be no disappointment in the bout.

With Joe Mullen of Trenton, and Buck Krouse of Broad Ford, opening the show promptly at 8:30 o'clock, fans should not delay getting into their seats early. The admission of a boxing show in this section of the state. The Fayette A. C. will have choice seats on sale with Tony Cuno at the West Penn Billiard parlors until 8 o'clock tonight. Eddie Kennedy, the efficient referee of Pittsburgh, will conduct all the bouts.

Those who do not have seats for the fight had better apply at the box office early if they want to get a place of vantage.

Now that the local boxing season is to be closed by the best bout of the entire winter we ought to hear a lot about baseball next week.

MANY OUTINGS ALREADY BOOKED FOR W. P. PARKS

The management of Olympia park, located at Versailles, near McKeesport, and Oakford park, midway between Greensburg and Jeannette, reports that an unusually large number of outings for this season of the year have been booked. Quite a number of organizations in Connellsville and vicinity will be taking these resorts.

Both parks have been undergoing extensive repairs during the past few weeks. Every building will be painted before opening day, which will be announced soon; additional benches for the comfort of picnickers have been secured, and many beautiful flower beds have been planted.

New and better amusements have been erected, the most important of which is the "leap frog" at Olympia park. To construct this amusement, the only one of its kind in the state, the park owners, under the direction of the Fayette A. C., have had a half-mile of dips and will undoubtedly become the amusement sensation of the state. The lake has been enlarged, and the other park features include the athletic field, dancing pavilion and amusements of all kinds. It is an ideal picnic park and is easily reached from Connellsville via the Baltimore & Ohio railroad.

Oakford park is one of the best of its size in the state. It abounds in natural beauties, while its amusement features are many and varied. The same company, operator, both Olympia and Oakford parks, and report that the indications point to a most successful and busy season.

The house will be pretty evenly divided as to rosters. Tommy has a lot of friends here, and then Donnelly is a well known figure in Fayette county.

From Dawson comes Frank Tarr's report that he doesn't think Connellsville will be able to produce anything good enough to defeat his "Yough Valley" independent.

AMERICA ENTERED WAR AFTER PARLEY WAS IMPOSSIBLE

of every man who rose to greet the president when he entered the room.

The solemnity of the moment had intensified the austerity which those who do not know him well mistakenly suppose to be his prevailing humor. As I shall show later, Woodrow Wilson is a man of gaiety and humor. But this was a day when only serious thought could hold place in any mind. The destiny of 100,000,000 people lay in the hands of the President of the United States—perhaps the destiny of the world.

No man there had failed to read the text of the German note which was the occasion of our meeting, but the President, in measured tones, giving weight to every significant syllable, read it to us again.

Cabinet is unanimous.

I have no doubt his mind was already made up as to the right course to take, but, before expressing an opinion, he called upon his colleagues to declare their views. Each man spoke freely and frankly what he thought. Expressions varied in tone and in approach to the main problem, but all agreed upon one thing—the time had come when diplomatic relations with Germany must be severed. This was the President's belief. Nor do I think it was any surprise to him that his colleagues were unanimous in support of it. The cabinet stood as a unit for the dismissal of Ambassador Bernstorff and the ending of all further traffic with the empire of the Hohenzollerns.

Although the session lasted for several hours, this decision was reached comparatively early. It had required no debate. The unanswerable argument was before us in the German note—defiant, perfidious, barbaric. The remaining time was devoted to discussing what should be the next step in the various departments of the government, more particularly in those of state, war and navy. The severance of relations, it was realized, would create an exceedingly critical situation, and no one tried to deceive himself with the supposition that it was not likely to lead in a few weeks at most to open war. Hence the importance of mapping a program for immediate action.

Assured of Congress' Support.

From the cabinet meeting the President went to the capitol, and discussed the situation with members of the Senate committee on foreign relations and other senators. He was assured of their support in any steps he considered necessary.

I returned to the navy department so thoroughly convinced hostilities were imminent that I sent out the following telegram—"Six Albatrosses. In view of present international situation take every precaution to protect the government plants and vessels."

"Albatross" was the code word for "All the navy."

I pass now to the second of the two pre-war cabinet meetings which had to do with his decisions. Much happened between February 2 and March 20 of absorbing interest and importance, but I will reserve the telling of it for a subsequent article.

March 20 Fateful Date.

Tuesday, March 20, has been overlooked in the war chronologies so far as I have observed. But the day should be there and underscored as a day fateful for America and mankind.

Eleven days earlier the President had called Congress to meet in special session on April 16, "to receive such communication as may be made by the executive."

But events were moving rapidly. Four American vessels had been sunk without warning—the Albatross, City of Memphis, Illinois and Vigilance—with the loss of American lives. German U-boats were destroying shipping, neutral as well as belligerent, by the hundred thousand tons. On March 12 we had begun arming merchantmen, but it was already evident this defense was insufficient.

Still Congress be called in session at an earlier date?

If so, what message should the President send in view of the situation?

These were the two vitally important questions the meeting of March 20 was called to answer.

Wilson Explains Situation.

With an even greater solemnity than had marked his utterance following the receipt of the U-boat note, the President set forth the serious character of the situation. He told what had been done to protect American lives; he reviewed the failure of these measures to insure absolute security; he seemed disinclined to take the step which would allow of his recall, and with a sort of detachment from the emotional phases of the problem, he submitted it to the cabinet and invited an individual expression of opinion.

There were those present who had been ready for some months to enter the struggle; there were others, who, sharing the eagerness of the President to protect American rights, if possible, without recourse to war, had come reluctantly to the decision that there was now nothing left to do but to defend those rights with the full power of the nation whatever cost it might involve.

It was curious to listen to men after men present his views. Every man of the 10 was making for the same goal, the same terrible but inescapable objective, and every man approached it by a different path.

Only One Course Open.

The arguments varied; the measure of emotion varied; but in the end 10 men looking into the eyes of the President of the United States said to him there was only one course open to America—she must throw the weight of her great power against the character of war that was being waged by Germany.

Then came said it to the one man who would bear in heaviest measure the burden of that decision.

COMPLETE HOME FURNISHERS

And the one man who never evaded responsibility shared the view of his associates, and put his shoulders under the burden. From that hour he bore it with unflinching courage. In the end it broke his health, but it never broke his spirit.

Decision to call Congress in session on April 2, instead of on April 16, was quickly reached in the light of the bigger decision.

It was when these matters had been settled that a member of the cabinet read aloud a sheaf of telegrams conveying the impression that the people of America were clamoring for war, and it was in response to this display of feeling that the President spoke the words with which I began my narrative.

"I Want to Do Right."

"We are not governed by my opinion in our conclusion," said he. "I want to do right, whether it is popular or not." The next morning the President issued his proclamation summoning Congress for April 2, "to receive a communication by the executive on vexed questions of national policy which should be taken immediately under consideration."

In the meantime, returning from the cabinet meeting to the navy department, I had ordered the fleet to proceed at once from its maneuvering ground in Cuban waters to Hampton roads. If war was coming we wanted our ships nearer home. But the details which have to do with the navy program in these immediately preceding days belong to another story. (The third article, telling of the mobilization of the Navy, will be published in The Courier tomorrow.) Use our classified advertisements.

News of Dunbar

DUNBAR, April 14.—The home of Mrs. Hannah McClain at Palmerton on Oakmont farm, was the scene on Tuesday of last week of one of the most delightful surprises known in the history of that village. The affair was planned by Mrs. Thomas Jones, a sister of Mrs. McClain, and what Mrs. Jones does is never done by halves. The occasion was Mrs. McClain's 71st birthday, and as that lady was sitting quietly in her home, surrounded by the inmates of the past and possibly contemplating some activities for the future, she was disturbed by a loud rap at her door, and when she went to see the cause of her surprise, to find a large crowd of friends and neighbors, bearing well laden baskets, and bright with smiles and good wishes, shouting their congratulations.

When the company sat down to the table, Mrs. Jones was made master of ceremonies. The after dinner speeches were reminiscent and interesting. Mrs. McClain's 71 years were not spent under a bushel. She had been observed and having seen Dunbar grow from a little house about a little one-horse farm, to its present proportions, she enlightened the younger guests with historical reminiscences. She distinctly remembered when the old Hanks-Harper wooden factory had made cloth and blankets for clothing and comfort for the entire community. And not only for this community, but from all the country round about. Farmers from Broad Ford, Franklin township, Flatwoods and Plumcock (now Upper-Middletown) brought their wool supplies to have them turned into materials for home use; and from almost the same territory, when the corn was brought to Spier's mill, the walls of which still stand. She had seen the old copper shop in operation. It stood near the present site of the Pennsylvania railroad freight station, where William Bodkin had trade barrels for local and distant trade. She had seen the present town of Dunbar laid out by T. W. Watt, and the first houses constructed, and all that has developed since. These and many more things she knew, and her story was intensely interesting.

These reminiscences were followed by music, both instrumental and vocal, and other enjoyments till the time came for the company to disperse.

Mrs. R. A. Rodkey, who suffered an attack of tonsillitis last week, has sufficiently recovered to be able to resume her school. She teaches at Youngstown in North Union township. Michael Metelko, a well known Uniontown merchant, spent Sunday visiting his wife's mother, Mrs. Albert Mulac of Conneltsville. Mrs. Metelko and baby are spending a few weeks at the home of her parents, and her husband joins them on Sundays.

Almon Tressler is on a trip to Wyoming transacting business for his father. He will be gone for several weeks. A letter from Robert A. Rodkey, who several weeks ago went to Denver to overcome an attack of tuberculosis, states that he is doing fine. He has consulted two specialists and both of them tell him that his attack is not serious and that he will be entirely well within three months. He has attached himself to an engineer corps and is enjoying the salubrious climate and lighter air. Plans have already been perfected by which Mr. Rodkey will take a trip to that city in June and accompany him home.

Mrs. R. A. Rodkey who is in a Boston hospital, is showing improvement and if all goes well expects to be home again within two months. Rev. Hardin who was with her returned home last week much encouraged by the outlook, and his congregation rejoices to know that pastor's wife is so soon to be with them again.

Mrs. Eliza Twigg of Allison was here to attend the funeral of her aunt, the late Mrs. Margaret Hardy of the furnace hill.

Mrs. Margaret Lehman who has been ill for the past two weeks, is improving. Her mother, Mrs. J. A. Lehman, is also confined to her bed with an attack of the grip.

G. Fred Baker and daughter of Hardy Hill were visiting Mrs. Heater Martin of Ferguson road Sunday.

"OUTSIDE THE LAW"—Presenting Priscilla Dean supported by the marvellous character actor, Lon Chaney, is today's feature attraction and will also be presented tomorrow. The picture is a melodrama, but not simple. Priscilla Dean as Molly Madden. A creature of smiles and frowns, tears and laughter, fear and daring, revenge and sacrifice, hate and love. Tod Browning, the author, gave Molly Madden a soul. Priscilla Dean has given her the breath of life. The portrayal of this remarkable screen character is the work of emotional artistry. Wheeler Oakman as "Dapper Bill Ballard," a gentleman crook who "turns to the right"; E. A. Warren, as Chang Lo, an Oriental sage with the gentleness of a mother and the vengeance of a monarch; Ralph Lewis, the dean of all screen fathers; Melbourne MacDowell and Wilton Taylor, storied actors little Stanley Goethals, a new screen youngster whom photography fans will adore, and many other outstanding players unite in support of Miss Dean to make "Outside the Law" a masterpiece.

THE ORPHEUM.

"THE TEXAN"—A William Fox picture with Tom Mix, the daring cowboy, in the leading role, is being shown today and will also be the feature attraction tomorrow. "The Texan" is truly a thrilling tale of the Southwest. It gives Mix every opportunity to display his skill in the saddle, and at the same time is blessed with a story that lifts its head and shoulders, above the usual Western type of picture. Mix is seen as Tex Benton, typical Texan, happy-go-lucky, full of pranks, whose six shooter is set on a hair trigger. One trick after another gets him into no end of escapades. Romance overtakes him. Love throws her sugarcoated lariat over his head when Alice Marston, a girl from the East—played by Gloria Hope—meets the irrepressible cowpuncher and encourages him to win the world's championship in a rodeo. Incidentally the most hair-raising events of the recent annual rodeo at Prescott

THE PARAMOUNT.

"THE STRANGER"—An interesting picture in five acts featuring an all-star cast, is being presented today and will also be the leading attraction tomorrow. The story is delightful throughout and the picture will please all who see it. The production as a whole is one of the good entertainment value. The staging of the scenes are splendid and the story is equally acted.

BULL-DOG DRUMMOND

The Adventures of A Demobilized Officer Who Found Peace Dull

by CYRIL McNEILE "JAPPER"

Illustrations by IRWIN MYERS

Copyright by Geo H Doran Co

"Did you—did you hear—anything?" With a vain endeavor to speak calmly, his host looked at Hugh.

"That night-bird?" he answered easily. "For noise, the make, don't they? Sometimes in France, when everything was still, and only the ghostly green flames went blazing up, one used to hear 'em. Started nervous shivers out of their lives." He talked on, and gradually the color came back to the other man's face. But Hugh noticed that he drained his port at a gulp, and immediately refilled his glass.

Outside everything was still; no repetition of that short, strangled cry again disturbed the silence. With the training bred of many hours in No Man's Land, Drummond was listening, even while he was speaking, for the faintest suspicious sound—but he heard nothing. The soft whispering night-noises came gently through the window, and the man who had screamed once did not even whimper again. He remembered hearing a similar cry near the brick-stacks at Guinchy, and two nights later he had found the giver of it, at the edge of a mine-crater, with glazed eyes that still held in them the horror of the final second. And more persistently than ever, his thoughts centered on the fifth occupant of the Rialto-Royce.

It was with almost a look of relief that Mr. Benton listened to his tale of war about his car.

"Of course you must stop here for the night," he cried. "Phyllis, my dear, will you tell them to get a room ready?"

With an inscrutable look at Hugh, in which thankfulness and apprehension seemed mingled, the girl left the room. There was an unnatural glitter in her father's eyes—a flash on his cheeks hardly to be accounted for by the warmth of the evening; and it struck Drummond that during the time he had been pretending to look at his car, Mr. Benton had been fortifying himself. It was obvious, even to the soldier's unprofessional eye, that the man's nerves had gone to pieces, his daughter's worst forebodings were likely to be fulfilled. He talked disjunctively and fast; his hands were not steady, and he seemed to be always waiting for something to happen.

Hugh had not been in the room ten minutes before his host produced the whisky, and during the time that he took to drink a mild nightcap, Mr. Benton succeeded in lowering three extremely strong glasses of spirit. And what made it the more and was that the man was obviously not a heavy drinker by preference.

At eleven o'clock Hugh rose and said good-night.

"You'll ring if you want anything, won't you?" said his host. "We don't have very many visitors here, but I hope you'll find everything you require. Breakfast at nine."

Drummond closed the door behind him, and stood for a moment in silence, looking round the hall. It was deserted, but he wanted to get the geography of the house firmly imprinted on his mind. He stepped across toward the drawing-room. In spite of his hopes, he found the girl.

She rose the instant he came in, and stood by the mantelpiece with her hands locked.

"What was it?" she half-whispered. "That awful noise at dinner?"

He looked at her gravely for a while, and then he shook his head.

"Shall we leave it as a night-bird for the present?" he said quietly. Then he turned toward her, and took her hands in his own. "Go to bed, little girl," he ordered. "This is my wish. And, may I say, I think you're just wonderful. Thank God you saw my advertisement!"

Gently he released her hands, and walking to the door, held it open for her. "If by any chance," he should hear things in the night—turn over and go to sleep again."

"But what are you going to do?" she cried.

Hugh grinned. "I haven't the remotest idea," he answered. "Don'tless the Lord will provide."

The instant the girl had left the room Hugh switched off the lights, and stepped across to the curtains, which covered the long windows. He pulled them aside, letting them come together behind him; then, cautiously, he unbolts one side of the big center window. Silently he dodged across the lawn toward the big trees at the end, and leaning up against one of them, he proceeded to make a more detailed survey of his objective, The Elms. It was the same type of house as the one he had just left, and the grounds seemed about the same size. A wire fence separated the two places, and in the darkness Hugh could just make out a small wicket-gate, closing a path which connected both houses. He tried it, and found to his satisfaction that it opened silently.

Save for one room on the ground-floor the house was in darkness, and Hugh determined to have a look at that room. There was a click in the curtains, through which the light was streaming out, which struck him as having possibilities.

Keeping under cover, he edged toward it, and at length he got into a position from which he could see inside. And what he saw made him decide to chance it, and go even closer.

Seated at the table was a man he did not recognize; while on either side of him sat Lakington and Peterson. Lying on a sofa smoking a cigarette and reading a novel was a tall dark girl, who seemed completely uninterested in the proceedings or the other three. Hugh placed her at once as the doubtful daughter Irma, and resumed his watch on the group at the table.

A paper was in front of the man, and Peterson, who was smoking a large cigar, was apparently suggesting that he should make use of the pen, which Lakington was obligingly holding in readiness. In all respects a harmless tableau, save for one small thing—the expression on the man's face. Hugh had seen it before often—only then it had been called shell-shock. The man was dazed, semi-unconscious. Every now and then he stared round the room, as if he wondered; then he would shake his head and pass his hand wearily over his forehead. For a quarter of an hour the scene continued; then Lakington produced an instrument from his pocket. Hugh saw the man shrink back in terror, and reach for the pen. But what impressed him most in that momentary flash of action was Peterson. There was something inhuman in his complete passivity. Even as he watched the man signing his name, no trace of emotion showed on his face—whereas on Lakington's there shone a feralish satisfaction.

The document was still lying on the table, when Hugh produced his revolver. He knew there was foul play about, and the madness of what he had suddenly made up his mind to do never struck him; being that manner of fool, he was made that way. But he breathed a pious prayer that he would shoot straight—and then he held his breath. The crack of the shot and the bursting of the only electric light bulb in the room were almost simultaneous, and the next second, with a roar of "Come on, boys," he burst through the window. At an immense advantage over the others, who could see nothing for the moment, he blundered round the room. He timed the blow at Lakington to a nicety; he hit him straight on the point of the jaw and he felt the man go down like a log. Then he grabbed at the paper on the table, which was in his hand, and, picking the dazed signer up bodily, he rushed through the window onto the lawn. There was not an instant to be lost; only the impossibility of seeing when suddenly plunged into darkness, had enabled him to pull the thing off so far. And before that advantage disappeared he had to be back at The Larches with his burden, no light weight, for even a man of his strength to carry.

But there seemed to be no pursuit, no line and cry. As he reached the little gate he paused and looked back, and he fancied he saw outside the window a gleam of white, such as a shirt front. He lingered for an instant, peering into the darkness and recovering his breath, when with a vicious snarl something hurled itself at the rear of him. Drummond lingered no more; long years of experience left no doubt in his mind as to what that

IODINE FOR RASHES AND SKIN TROUBLES

Quickly Stops All Irritation.
For Skin Troubles that Distress and Disfigure, for Eruptions, Old Sores, Chronic Ulcers, Boils, Ringworm, etc., Iodine is an antiseptic and healing remedy largely used by physicians as well as Mothers who know from experience in raising their families, the virtues of Iodine. Promptly and gently it soothes, itches and burns, that keep you awake nights and embarrass you by day, should be treated with Iodine to stop their spread and to heal. As a well-known medical authority says, "Iodine applied over the face and neck like a greasy film, producing comfort." But of course, you can't use greasy Iodine. Good mother practice calls for Iodine in its best form—standardized Iodine—standard, an accurate quantity with all the efficacy of organic Iodine, but does not irritate, and leaves no greasy stain. It soothes, penetrates and heals.

Standardized Iodine is a family remedy for every day use. Recommended not only for troubles of the skin, but Cuts, Sprains, Wounds and Bruises are instantly relieved by this triumph of medical research. Iodine for the relief of any skin disease can multiply you with a jar at little cost.—AD—something was.

"Compressed-air rifle—or electric," he muttered to himself, stumbling on, and half dragging, half carrying his dazed companion.

He was not very clear in his own mind what to do next, but the matter was settled for him unexpectedly. Barely had he got into the drawing-room, when the door opened and the girl rushed in.

"Get him away at once," she cried. "In your car. . . . Don't waste a second. I've started her up."

"Good girl," he cried enthusiastically. "But what about you?" She stamped her foot impatiently. "I'm all right—absolutely all right. Get him away—that's all that matters."

Drummond grinned. "The humorous thing is that I haven't an idea who the bird is—except that—"

He paused, with his eyes fixed on the

"The Humorous Thing is That I Haven't an Idea Who the Bird Is—Except that—" man's left thumb. The top joint was crushed into a red, shapely pulp, and suddenly the meaning of the instrument Lakington had produced from his pocket became clear. Also the reason of that dreadful cry at dinner.

DYSPEPSIA IS GREATEST ENEMY OF MODERN MAN

Distressing Malady Is Most Prevalent of All Present-Day Diseases—Phonics Are Relieved by Tanlac.

Of all the conditions that afflict humanity, chronic dyspepsia, or what is more commonly known as indigestion, is probably the most prevalent.

This most universal malady has baffled the medical profession for years, and the most skilled specialists have been unable to cope with it successfully.

Hours might be consumed in describing the sufferings, mental and physical, of the sufferer from chronic dyspepsia, and their failure heretofore to get relief. A morbid, unwell, whimsical and melancholy condition of the mind, aside from the nervousness and physical suffering, is the usual condition of the average dyspeptic.

Dyspepsia, or indigestion, as the case may be, is usually caused by the eating of too much or unsuitable food, and the mucous membrane of the stomach becomes irritated, and there is set up an acute or sub-acute gastritis. This condition, which prevents the proper digestion of the food, is apt to ferment and decompose, and as a result the familiar distressing symptoms of dyspepsia may arise. In mild cases there is nothing more than an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach, with a certain amount of depression, headache, loss of appetite, perhaps belching of gas and occasional vomiting. There may be also accompanying intestinal symptoms, such as constipation, pain in the back, etc. There may be only the familiar heartburn due to the accumulation of the stomach and from excessive gases of fermentation.

In the most severe cases—those that last over a day or two—the symptoms enumerated may be much more intense. The distress may be marked and the general constitutional symptoms more evident. When this stage is reached the loss of appetite, the mental depression, and the general uncomfortable feeling in the stomach are much more pronounced. This is particularly true in acute gastritis.

It frequently occurs from continued errors in diet, this condition becomes chronic, and the symptoms persist for an indefinite period. The appetite is very apt to be varied, but at times very good. Heartburn is frequent, if not constant. The stomach is painful on pressure, the tongue is coated, there is a bad taste in the mouth, and there are changes in the amount of salivary secretion. Constipation is also usually present, although diarrhoea may alternate.

Now, instead of dyspepsia being cured if the diet is properly looked after and with the proper treatment. Proper eating, the proper amount of food and hygienic living are the most important features of the treatment. Most people eat too fast and eat too much.

One noted authority has said that the stomach is the fountain head of health or disease, as the case may be. Tanlac was designed primarily for the regulation of the stomach, liver and bowels, but it is no uncommon thing for persons who use it to find that they have also been cured of rheumatism and other ailments not generally recognized as having their origin in stomach trouble.

There is probably not a single portion of the body that is not benefited by the helpful action of Tanlac, which begins its work by stimulating the digestive organs, thereby enriching the blood and invigorating the whole system. Next it enables the weak, worn-out stomach to thoroughly digest the food, permitting the assimilation of the nourishing elements. Millions of people have not only been relieved of the most obstinate forms of dyspepsia and indigestion by the Tanlac treatment after other remedies had failed, but many of them have reported a remarkable and rapid increase in weight and a return to normal health and strength by its use.—AD—
